

Bid farewell to the super gap

Women often retire with 24% less super than men*.
You can help change that.

We're here to help

When it comes to super, women are retiring with up to $95,696 less super than their male counterparts*.

This is because on average, women still earn between 13% and 19% less than men, and the effects of the COVID-19 Early Release of super starts to impact the balances of Australians.

This is especially worrying, since women tend to live longer than men, and therefore need more money to finance their retirement years.

Not to mention a woman's working life is commonly interrupted by parental leave and caring for loved ones.

Your future is in your hands

As an industry super fund with a majority female membership, REI Super are here to help our members take responsibility for their own financial future.

So we're providing you with seven simple, yet effective ways to boost your super and achieve the retirement you deserve:

7 easy ways to take control

1. Consolidate - save paying multiple fees and insurance premiums by finding and combining your super accounts

2. Contribute more - Even small additional contributions to your account each month can make a big difference to the size of your super account

3. If you have a partner, chat about how they can help boost your balance by making a spouse contribution to your super.

4. Government boost - If you're not on a high income, you can grow your super faster by getting a little boost with a Government co-contribution.

5. Check your investment options - Is your super invested right for you? Are you invested in a conservative option when you should be in growth? Try our investment Risk Profile quiz.

6. Check your insurance - It's a good idea to review your insurance annually, or whenever you have a major life event that impacts your personal financial commitments.

7. Seek financial advice - As an REI Super member, you have access to professional financial advisors who can tailor advice to suit your needs. Call us on 1300 13 44 33.
